

Public Policy

Bridging Disciplines Programs allow you to earn an interdisciplinary certificate that integrates area requirements, electives, courses for your major, internships, and research experiences.

This BDP focuses on how change happens: how did a journalist's inquiry into the effects of agricultural chemicals give rise to the environmental movement; how did a black woman's refusal to yield her bus seat to a white man galvanize the civil rights movement; how did a diplomat's cable about Russian history give rise to the policy of containment? Students will learn about the policy-making process, beginning with the point at which someone senses a problem or an opportunity and begins to press the matter. We will then walk through the processes by which that sense of a problem is turned into a public policy issue through research, mobilization, the engagement of political leaders, and in some instances, the passage and implementation of new policy.

The Public Policy BDP will be beneficial to students who aspire to positions in policy-relevant institutions such as government agencies, legislative offices, think tanks, and advocacy groups. The program also will help students who plan to pursue careers in business, where success often depends on understanding how government works.

Upon completion of 19 credit hours from the options listed to the right, you will earn a certificate in Public Policy.

The Public Policy BDP is overseen by a panel of faculty members from across campus. Members include Michael Lind (LBJ), Norma Cantu (Education), Joel Cobb (Business), Edwin Dorn (LBJ), James Galbraith (LBJ), Bryan Jones (Government), Eric McDaniel (Government), Susan Nold (Communication Studies), Talia Stroud (Communication Studies), Jeremi Suri (LBJ and History), Angela Valenzuela (Mexican American Studies), and Ruth Wasem (Public Affairs).
